

"Workforce achievements or problems are created by the 'relations cloth.'

The strongest and most durable such workplace cloth is formed in the frame of a relationship woven of many bidirectional 'threads' comprised of numerous essential fibers. Any reliable improvements or repairs are made by understanding the important aspects of the fibrous threads combined with accuracy in the design and crafting of the composite weave that one desires in the whole cloth.

Yes, this is complex, as are most substantive matters. But if one approaches with the right skills and capable tools, achieving and maintaining the 'vital weave' is both practical and doable. Conversely, without knowledge and tools it is inevitable there will be an entangling and daunting malaise of rip and rot, for weak attention to any or all of the essential parts inevitably leads to unwanted consequences in the whole.

Substantial rewards of possessing a stronger cloth are yet to be imagined and realized by even the best organizations and workers. To begin, simply seek basic skills, apply the right tools and weave."

Danny McCall

*"Make everything as simple as possible, but not simpler."
—Albert Einstein*

All Rights Reserved
TalentSphere, LLC 2004

The entirety of these materials including all information content and graphics encompass the protected intellectual property of TalentSphere, LLC and are not to be utilized or applied in any manner, form or application, unless accompanied by an appropriate license that remains in effect for the application or usage.

Unleashing the Power of People... by Design!